

INTERBORO SEEKS TRUCE IN GOULD'S SUBWAY HOLD-UP

Manhattan Directors to Consider Terms of Compromise on Extensions.

M'CALL READY TO ACT.

"To-Morrow," Says Service Chairman, but Refuses to Say He'll Sign Contracts.

Despite announcements from the Interborough that it would ignore the efforts of the Gould interests in the Manhattan Railway Company, whose elevated lines it leases, in seeking to tie up subway contract negotiations, and that it would accept third-tracking certificates from the Public Service Commission and defy the other concerns, Interborough has changed its mind.

A special meeting of the board of directors of the Manhattan Railway Company has been called for to-morrow morning in the offices of the company at No. 165 Broadway, and at that time the directors of the company owning the elevated lines will be called upon to pass on a proposition from the Interborough, seeking to adjust the differences of the companies.

INTERBORO PROPOSES COMPROMISE WITH GOULD.

George Gould appeared as an eleventh-hour interrupter of the plans of the Interborough and the Public Service Commission and city officials to jam through the dual subway contracts. He, as representative of an $8,000,000 interest in the Manhattan, contended that their rights were not sufficiently safeguarded in the third-tracking and extension propositions of the contract. The Interborough asked the Commission to give them the necessary certificates instead of to the Manhattan, as originally planned, and the Goulds were told to go to court for redress.

Then came a sudden proposition from the Interborough, and, according to R. M. Callaway, a director of the Manhattan, this will be acted on to-morrow. The Interborough directors will meet Wednesday, and it is expected they will be ready to accept a suggestion for an adjustment that the Manhattan will offer.

It is said the Interborough wants the contract at all hazards; that the dejection of the Goulds was merely a move in a trade to give up as little as was possible to the owners of the "L" line, which the Interborough has leased for 99 years.

Chairman McCall reiterated today that to-morrow would see action on the contracts.

"Something still uncertain alone can bring about a delay," he said.

In the meanwhile the chairman refuses to tell how he will vote on the proposed contracts. He was scheduled to have a conference with John Purroy Mitchell, President of the Board of Aldermen and opponent of the contracts, late this afternoon. President Mitchell promised to show the chairman many serious faults in the contracts.

"Chairman McCall told me he would keep his mind open on the subject until after he had talked with Mr. B. J. Mitchell several days ago."

Mr. and Mrs. Auerbach reached home while the building was burning. They had been visiting friends and saw the light from the fire while they were on their way home but until they reached the immediate vicinity did not suppose the fire was in their own home.

THE LENTEN LOOKING GLASS

Tenth Article of a Series.

Don't Marry Under False Pretenses; Deception Should Be Prevented by Law

"Hypocrisy is Really at the Root of the Faults of Men and Women, for Don't They Always Try to Make Each Other Believe What Is Not So?" Writes "O. Y."

"Modern Woman Is Beginning to Realize Her Brains Are the Same as Man's, and She Is Taking Her Place Beside Man in All Lines of Work," Says "Insurance Agent."

BY NIXOLA GREELEY-SMITH.

After a long meditation before the Lenten Looking Glass, a woman reader confides to us that while man's special defect is undoubtedly an overweening opinion of himself, hypocrisy, both in men and women, is the greatest evil of modern life. "There should be a law to keep people from marrying under false pretenses," she declares. If this means that no one should achieve matrimony through the use of false whiskers or a curly black wig, I agree with every word of it. In subtler matters it might be rather difficult to determine what constitutes pretense and what legitimate love making. In the first ferment of the blood that sends its wireless message of danger ahead we do not know we are pretending to each other. In fact, we don't pretend. If a student of philosophy becomes enamored of a young lady who dances the turkey trot he feels for the moment a real sympathy with forms of gayety he thinks he really never understood before.

And under the magic influence of courtship the turkey-trotting dandelion really imagines that she is interested in hearing what Nietzsche had to say about the origin of Greek tragedy. Of course, after the wedding Nietzsche will resume his normal aspect in her eyes as a dreary bore, while the philosopher husband will have to summon all his endurance to face the amusements of his butterfly bride. Each may feel that the other pretended, yet each will be guiltless.

Love is merely an anaesthetic which nature administers to persons men and women of the palateness of matrimony. Persons within its spell are hardly more accountable than if they inhabited some dim loto land to which they had drifted on the ship of an other dream. The most honest of us pretends when he is in love.

There are certain sordid deceptions of course which should be forbidden by law, as The Evening World reader suggests. Every intelligent person must be heartily in favor of laws which would make it impossible for men and women suffering from certain forms of disease to marry.

THE LOVER FOOLS HIMSELF
THE MOST OF ALL.

But we can't legislate against the deceptions of the soul. For the lover fools himself most of all. He is his own worst victim. Moreover a great many men and women who marry are conscientious enough to try seriously to live up to their ante-nuptial pretenses, and in so doing they confer happiness upon their wives or husbands, and they also make themselves into the things they pretended to be. Many a man has achieved success far beyond the measure of his natural powers simply because he felt that he had to try to live up to his wife's ideal of him to become as great a person as she imagined him to be.

Why should we not pretend to be better than we are if it's the quickest way to become better? Many more marriages are wrecked by the bored refusal to keep up the pretenses of courtship than are injured by actual deceptions.

When you are bored you are your worst, most selfish self. When you are under love's first amazing enchantment life holds no heroism, no rapture, no sacrifice for which you do not feel yourself equipped. But you are pretending in either case, and the best way perhaps is to pretend so well that you fool yourself and to keep on doing it. But the reader who does not believe in pretending has some very good arguments to offer. She writes:

HYPOCRISY IN MEN AND WOMEN TOO.

Dear Madam—One of your readers struck a true chord by stating conceit is one of the many faults of mankind. Egotism runs a close second.

One quality is a plenty, when the best is so reasonable.

man is beginning to realize that her brains are the same as man's. She is taking her place beside him in all lines of work. The few men who criticize her for doing this are only the drones lacking ability. The modern woman is the most beautiful that the world has ever seen. True beauty in a woman combines intelligence. The new York woman heads the modern list and the Jersey woman is queen of them all. There are positively no sane man-haters or woman-haters in the world unless it be that they hate themselves. No man remains an old bachelor all his life because he hates women. Often he cherishes an old departed memory or harbors a foolish sentimental devotion to a misplaced love. Sometimes his esteem for woman may be so great that he fears his own society would make some poor creature unhappy. To be sure an old one holds his seat in a car, but perhaps it is because he is ashamed to offer woman such a small favor. Criticize woman as we may, we cannot conceive of anything more beautiful than a mother's love and unselfishness. What's the matter with the modern woman? She's all right. Three cheers for her. Sometimes his esteem for woman may be so great that he fears his own society would make some poor creature unhappy. To be sure an old one holds his seat in a car, but perhaps it is because he is ashamed to offer woman such a small favor. Criticize woman as we may, we cannot conceive of anything more beautiful than a mother's love and unselfishness. What's the matter with the modern woman? She's all right. Three cheers for her. HURRAH.

man is beginning to realize that her brains are the same as man's. She is taking her place beside him in all lines of work. The few men who criticize her for doing this are only the drones lacking ability. The modern woman is the most beautiful that the world has ever seen. True beauty in a woman combines intelligence. The new York woman heads the modern list and the Jersey woman is queen of them all. There are positively no sane man-haters or woman-haters in the world unless it be that they hate themselves. No man remains an old bachelor all his life because he hates women. Often he cherishes an old departed memory or harbors a foolish sentimental devotion to a misplaced love.
